Peanut butter and nut butters

Eating the right amount of protein is very important when you have chronic kidney disease (CKD). During the earlier stages of CKD, it is common to limit the amount of protein in your diet. However, for those who require dialysis, a higher protein diet is needed. Dialysis patients often find it challenging to eat all of the recommended protein. Peanut butter and other nut butters such as almond or cashew butter can add protein to your diet. These however can be higher in potassium, phosphorus and even sodium than other protein sources, so ask your registered dietitian how much is right for you.

Once you know how much nut butter you can include in your diet, it can be added in a variety of ways. You can find peanut butter and other nut butters without added salt. Choose these lower-sodium options whenever they are available. Spread them on your toast in the morning. For snacking, nut butters can be a flavorful topping for low-sodium crackers or celery. Mix peanut butter with a little bit of yogurt and honey and add a pinch of cinnamon to create a delicious dip for sliced apples or pears.
